

Trailing the Champions

0
A A

Adventure with ATV's Now Polarisind.in Polaris-World's Leading Off Road Vehicles, Now in India. Enquire Now

Ads by Google

Tora Agarwala : Fri May 11 2012, 00:47 hrs

Share |

More from THE INDIAN EXPRESS

India

Does BJD have a 'Dalit killer' MLA, Congress asks Naveen Patnaik

ISB offers 'diversity scholarships' worth Rs 2.5 cr

World

First Asian woman dropped in UK cabinet reshuffle

Fake PM email creates flutter in Pakistan

Business

Reliance Communications hopes to sell tower biz next year

Indian Bank cuts home, car loan rates by up to 0.5%

Sports

Delhi govt announces Rs 20 lakh reward for Unmukt Chand

Tevez says mess up with Mancini proved 'blessing in disguise' for him

Showbiz

Preity Zinta twists her ankle in the paparazzi mishap

Shah Rukh Khan spends night in

Editorials

Paranoid at Home

A depleted debate

Columns

New lines of influence

Set the House in order

He was barely three years old, but he would pick up his tennis racket and play outdoors every morning. Later, watching him work hard on the game, his mother would worry about the outcome. But the boy was determined. It took him many tricky serves, blazing smashes and years of practice but in 1997, Mahesh Bhupathi won his first Grand Slam Title, the first Indian to do so. A new television documentary series, Travelling With the Pros, shows the sportsman, who has 11 grand slam titles to his name, compete in 2010 for one of the biggest tennis tournaments in the world, Roger Cup ATP Masters 1000.

"I've known Bhupathi for ages. It struck me as a good idea to travel with him during one of the tournaments and shoot alongside," says Bikram Saluja, director of the docu-series. He then decided to include six other prominent players from various sports, filming them as they competed in some of the biggest sporting events around the world.

An initiative of Aditya Birla Group and Puppeteer Films, Travelling with Pros constitutes seven, 48-minute short films on shooter and Olympic gold medalist Abhinav Bindra, badminton champion Saina Nehwal, Indian golfer Jeev Milkha Singh, India's first F1 racer Narain Karthikeyan, wrestler and Olympic Bronze medalist Sushil Kumar and snooker champion Pankaj Advani, besides Bhupathi. The series which took close to two years to make, will release on ESPN, June 2, and show every Saturday and Sunday at 7pm.

With cameras and seven crew members on their tail, the players share details of the lives they lead on tours. The documentary captures them in action, from the minute they arrive at their destinations, right through their training, till the very end of the competition. "For the viewer, it will be like undertaking a personal journey with these players. They have shared candid details, lending an insight into their sports as narrators of their own journey," says Saluja.

He agrees that it is a fine line one treads when following players around and beyond these championships. It is, after all, pressurising for the player, and the moments of anticipation, anxiety, winning or losing are extremely intimate. "Even if we did encroach on their personal space during testing times and crucial moments of the competition, thankfully, the players opened up like never before," Saluja asserts.

Quite unintentionally, the series works as a travelogue. With cities in Canada, USA, Russia, Syria, Germany and China as the setting, the documentary captures the local culture and the association of the sports with the places.

However, the focus remains in capturing sportspersons when they are perhaps most vulnerable. "We know their names, we know what they do, but this is the first time we'll find out what goes into making them who they are today," says Saluja.

Is your Mac running slow?
Clean your Mac from junk to make it faster!

MacKeeper Applications

Clean your Mac OS

Indian Express
Like 60,604

Latest News | Today's Paper | Edits & Columns

- No Indian community can claim majority s...
- Metro bridge slab collapses in Mumbai, i...
- Hike in petrol, diesel prices likely aft...
- SC/ST quota for promotions in govt jobs ...
- On way to airport, Sri Lankan pilgrims a...
- Uddhav Thackeray wants permit system for...
- Parliament nod to AIIMS Bill amid uproar

HOME 18 SHOP One Stop Shop for all Mobiles

upto 40% off

Smart Phones SHOP NOW Dual Sim | Android

FREE Shipping Order by phone 0120 4455918